

American Dexter Cattle Association

2009 Annual General Meeting

The annual General Meeting of the American Dexter Cattle Association was held in Fort Dodge, Iowa, hosted by Rick Seydel, a past director of the association.

The meeting was a great success, with many educational seminars on alternative beef marketing, vaccination systems for cattle, genetic testing options and general cattle management.

There was a showing of Dexter Cattle, with a sale following of animals that netted a total of $48,425.00 of Dexter Cattle sold. Dexter Cattle are a dual-purpose breed that produce milk as well as beef, and are the smallest breed of cattle in the United States, perfect for a family farm or smallholder that has limited acreage to raise animals.

Further information about Dexter Cattle can be found at www.dextercattle.org

along with information about where to, obtain them and other particulars.

Article Submitted By

Robert Seddon

Advertising Director

American Dexter Cattle Association